Tired of His Job.

Little James, six years, had been taught to pray each night for all his relatives and friends and consequently the list had grown quite large. So one night when it came time for the customary prayers he refused to say them "Well, well, James," said his mother "Why won't you say them? All good little boys say their prayers."
"Yes, but I'm tired."

"Oh, that's no excuse. Come, now that's a good boy." "Well," remarked James. "I guess I'll have to. But anyhow I'm not going to pray for everybody. I'm going to cut a lot of 'em out. Some of 'em will have to save themselves."—Harper's Magazine.
